This packet contains links to the digital resources located in Google Drive. When you click the links on the next slide, a popup with a button saying “Make a copy” will open to make saving the files to your Google Drive a little easier.

YOU MUST SAVE THESE FILES TO YOUR GOOGLE DRIVE TO MAKE THEM EDITABLE.

This free unit is a sample from my American History Series. Because this is a free sample, you will find a few differences from the paid resources in the series. This unit has one full unit test. The others in the series have multiple quizzes scattered throughout the lessons. The printable in this unit is approximately half as long as the others in the series as multiple versions of the organizers are provided in the paid resource to help differentiate instruction. If you like this resource, you might like to check out the full of the series.

Updating this series is a work in progress. When digital resources are added the covers will change to the ones below. If the TPT resource, has a different cover, the digital version will be coming soon. You might want to purchase now before the price goes up. Covers are clickable.

Resources for this unit can be in several locations:

- * Book Units Teacher Website – Be sure to check out the website as it contains resources that are not in the paid product such as craft ideas, a section of student written reports on famous people, and even lesson plans.
- * Google Drive
 - * Google Docs for Articles
 - * Google Slides for Organizers
 - * Google Forms for Quizzes
- * Printable – Even if you don't plan to use the foldable organizers, you will need to keep them handy as this is where you will find the answer keys.

You will find answer keys by looking at the printable resource. For many of the lapbook organizers, I created multiple versions. The final version is the answer key.

All of the photos in this resource are either in public domain or taken by me. Because I used public domain images or photos taken by me, I placed them on top of the slides. This means they can be resized and/or changed to different photos.

Images (mostly clipart) that are copyrighted have been embedded into the backgrounds and can't be moved.

Because the text is in textboxes or tables on the slides, it is editable. You can adapt it to meet the needs of your students. This also means that students can highlight the articles.

Information about the Videos

Advancements in technology amaze me! Just a year or two ago, the articles in Google Docs would have had a list of links that take you to suggested videos on the web. With advancements, these same links will actually allow you to view the videos as if you had downloaded them to your computer; however, the videos are still just suggested links. Because of technology, you can now view the videos directly through Google Docs without going back and forth to Youtube.

What This Means for You

- You can delete the videos by clicking on them and hitting the delete key on your keyboard. You are basically just deleting a link.
- Do you have some favorite videos you like to show? Because Google is the parent company for Youtube, you can live stream Youtube videos in Google Docs and Slides. Non-Youtube videos can also be added to your Google files if you place the videos in your Google Drive.
- The videos are streaming live from Youtube.
 - I don't have the means to test this, but my guess is they will be blocked if your school district has a block on viewing Youtube. Test this before class if you plan to use one of the videos at school.
 - If someone removes his/her video from the web, it will most likely be a broken link in Docs. Again, I can only test this with time. For legal reasons, I cannot download other people's videos and place them in my materials to prevent this from happening. If you find a broken link, please send me an email at teachwithgaymiller@gmail.com, so I can remove the link from the Google Doc and find suitable replacements.

Here are a few suggested videos to add to your unit. The suggestions are there to save you time and not as a means of promoting anyone's video.
